TALK OF THE TOWN

The old favorite—Clan Gordon picnic. Caledonia park, Saturday, July 30.—adv.

Barre and Barre granite in views and story—in Sunday's Boston Herald. To be sure of your copy leave order now at Martin's Book Store.—adv.

The usual program of field events and sports at the Clan picnic. Saturday, July 30, at Caledonia park. Look for posters and further information.—adv.

Almost the entire granite belt suspended manufacture to-day chiefly because of the hot weather and partly due to the short working period for the cutters on Saturday.

The four-weeks old infant of Mr. and Mrs. Kueor of 23 River street died yesterday afternoon at its home. This afternoon funeral services will be held from the home at 2 o'clock, burial to be made in Wilson cemetery in Graniteville.

Nelson Browne, the heavy hitting fielder of the Dartmouth varsity squad this season, has been passing a couple of days at his home on Cliff street in this city but to-day returned to Newport, where he expects to remain during the rest of the summer playing ball with the Newport baseball nine, composed of several other Dartmouth players.

Raymond and Clarence Martin, the two Williamstown lads who on July Fourth suffered severe burns and bruises and the latter a broken leg when a four-pound pail of black gunpowder was ignited in the front seat of the automobile in which they were riding, are recovering as fast as can be expected. Yesterday the broken leg of Clarence was reset, and the leg, which was the most severely injured, is doing nicely to-day.

The condition of Mrs. Battista Gilli, the woman who narrowly escaped instant death at the hands of Luigi Gobbi when he sent two bullets of a 32-calibre revolver into her body last Tuesday afternoon at her home, 7 Bubgee avenue, remains favorable to her recovery. The physicians have not as yet decided to remove the bullets located near the heart and kidney and unless infection sets in they are not likely to perform an operation for their removal.

A camping party, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Crawford of Pleasant street and two sons, Arthur and Elmer, the latter having his vacation from the Barre Gas Co., Miss Dorothy Shores, a clerk of the Homer Fitts Co., Leone Sargent of Buckley street, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Calderara, Francis O'Marr, who is having two weeks' vacation from the D. M. Miles Coal Co. office; Howard O'Marr, now having a vacation from the Adams Co., and Miss Mabel Stephen of Montpelier, have returned to their home, after enjoying a week at Mirror lake, Berlin.

In case of enlistment of 10 more men in the proposed machine gun company of the Vermont National Guard, Barre will be assured of having the company and stands a fair chance yet of getting the 1923 appropriation for a state armory. Of the 65 men necessary 55 have already passed the physical examination and signed the enlistment papers, and it seems only a matter of a few days now before the full quota will be reached. Neale Hooker, who is in charge of the organization work, feels confident that the company will be complete before the latter part of next week, and has made arrangements with the examining physicians to be at the Legion clubhouse again next Tuesday evening.

Two Generations of Soldiers.

We recall as though it were but yesterday the entry time in 1898 when the special train pulled in the side track at Fort Ethan Allen bringing from Chickamauga the Vermont boys who had offered their services in behalf of humanity and freedom in Cuba. Dread disease had proven more disastrous for them as a whole than could have been the aimless fire of the ill-trained Spaniards. Not a few of their number suffered long and some of them later yielded up their young lives as a sacrifice to free Cuba.

One of the Vermont boys who was a member of that expeditionary force and who was long an invalid as a result was Frank L. Greene, now congressman from the first district of Vermont.

On July 4, 23 years later, Congressman Greene through his open window in Washington heard the boom of the 48 guns being fired at Fort Myer, across the Potomac, as a salute to the Union. His thoughts must have moved swiftly back in retrospect over the changes that have come to the world and to America as well as to himself in these two decades and more. Yet you do not catch the full significance of the situation until you know all the circumstances.

As Congressman Greene listened to the booming of Uncle Sam's big guns in the splendid salute to the 48 states, there was added to all the intensity of his thorough-going Americanism the tender thought that his son Richard, then senior artillery officer, was in charge of the firing of that salute to our glorious Union.

Congressman Greene's mind must have reverted to the days in 1898 when that same son, coming barely to his knees, stood beside him when he went off to the war for native land and for Cuba. What a strange chance that this son should be in charge of firing of the salute he knew was being conducted while his father sat at the open window in Washington listening with pride to the salute he knew was being conducted in charge of the boy who watched him move out to war in 1898. Who knows what precious American sentiments and patriotic spirit may be passed on to a later generation as a result of the tender memories and the vigorous sentiments transmitted by Congressman Greene to his distinguished son in khaki in the years of the World war?—Burlington Free Press.

Depends on the Smell.

"My husband made a big lot of money lately and we're going to get a car."

"A limousine?"
"We ain't decided whether to get a limousine car or a gasoline car. Maybe you can tell me which limousine smell is as bad as gasoline!"—Boston Transcript.

Self-Protection.

Hub—If the woman is such a confirmed gossip why do you spend so much time visiting her?
Wife—Because I know that when she is talking to me she isn't talking about me.—Boston Transcript.
